

harder working spaces

The "Mud Room" provides a place to recharge, relax and bond with colleagues. Soft seating, ottomans and pull-up personal tables support different ways of working.

Privacy screens replaced workstation panels to keep sight lines open.

Outside of faculty private offices is a communal area for collaboration.

Michigan State University

Team Spirit Spreads with Athletic Administration Redesign

At Michigan State University, Spartan school spirit is plentiful. Their impressive athletic program is championed by student athletes and the many staff members who work hard behind the scenes. MSU wanted to create a new space where all athletic administration employees could work together under one roof. By bringing staff members physically closer, employees are able to better collaborate and foster a sense of unity.

Neumann/Smith Architecture lead the design of the space with NBS assisting on furniture selection and order placement. Team unity has been refreshed thanks to the new central location, and employees are able to better interface with their public community.

NBS partnered with Neumann/Smith, Steelcase and Coalesse to create an efficient space that works for employees with a flair of MSU's beloved branding. The new office structure optimizes space to comfortably accommodate employees and encourage collaboration. The design is open, with one area flowing seamlessly into another. A fresh color palate of grey and white stands out with pops of green, including MSU's signature shade of Nike Spartan Green.

Overall, the new space inspires collaboration, and specially configured zones make it even easier. There's a wide variety of meeting spaces, ranging from small to large group. A centralized kitchen area allows for casual encounters. The Mudroom is a lounge space suitable for relaxation or even laid-back meetings. Employees are free to work individually or together in 1855 Athletics, the perfect space that encourages MSU team spirit.

The large conference room reflects MSU's brand with pops of Nike Spartan Green on the seating and floor, along with branded graphics on the table and behind the built-in banquette. The green tones accent a gray and white color pallet throughout the space.

Centralized shared work area encourages casual run-ins with co-workers and offers different work postures to those from, including standing and lounging.

The building has a renewed energy and connects athletic administration faculty from across campus.
